SECTION A: READING

1 Read the following passage and answer the following questions:

Many scientists believe that music soothes the plant. It also helps it to grow. This is now a scientific fact. Lee Harsten, a sound engineer from New York, carried out some exciting experiments. Here is one of them.

Harsten's theory was that plants definitely react to music. In his experiment, he used two banana plants. He gave both plants the same light, heat and water. But for about an hour a day one of the plants „listened“ to some music. This music was in fact a high – pitched humming sound. He found that this plant grew faster. It also grew 70 percent faster than the other plant. Harsten explained this in a very scientific way. He said the hum (or similar music) stimulated the plant's breathing cells and made them stay open for longer periods. Because of this the plant took in more nutrients from the air than it normally would, and thus it grew faster. He also said that if the sound was played continuously, the breathing cells would not be able to close. Therefore the plant would grow so fast that it would kill itself.

Lynn and Joe Rapp, the authors of a book called „Indoor Plants“ say that plants respond to all sound, whether it is music or voices. These sound waves make vibrations which stimulate growth. They say plants have definite likes and dislikes in music. They certainly like classical music and they dislike bad, harsh, rock music.

Answer the following questions taking help from the passage above:

a) One night, when he went up to his room, he saw Pap, his father. He was almost fifty. His hair was long and tangled and greasy, completely black without any shades of grey and so were his long, mixed up whiskers. His face was dull and white which made him look dull and sick. As for his clothes, they were all rags. He had one ankle resting on the other knee; the boot on that foot was busted, and two of his shoes stuck through. His hat was lying on the floor; an old black slouch with the cap caved in, like a lid.

Huck stood looking at him. He was scared at first as he reminded him of the spankings he got from his father, but after looking at his plight he did not appear to be scared anymore and was ready to face him.

b) From the beginning of the novel, Mark Twain makes it clear that Huck is a boy who comes from the lowest levels of white society. His father is a drunk and a ruffian who disappears for months on end. Huck himself is dirty and frequently homeless.

Although Jim is a slave he makes every attempt to help him and cared for him which shows his sympathetic and compassionate nature.

He loves to be independent and enjoyed leading a carefree life. This is the reason why he hated being controlled by the widow and Miss Watson, who made every attempt to reform him and make him lead a civilized life.

His friendship with Tom Sawyer and Jim helps him to come out of difficult situations and gives him the strength to overcome all challenges.
